The Wheat Growing lands of Western Canada include all of the Province of Manitoba and the Territories of Assiniboia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, an area of 378,296 square miles, and taking in Western Ontario and Eastern British Columbia, rich mining and lumbering districts which are contained in the "circulation zone" of the Winnipeg Free Press, 511,121 square miles, a territory greater in extent than all the Eastern Canadian Provinces combined.

The Winnipeg Free Press circulation covers completely the whole of this vast field, being three times that of any other medium in its field. Not only is the supremacy of the Free Press in its own territory admitted by all, but it is recognized in Eastern Canada, in the United States and in Great Britain as the distinctively Western Journal of Canada.

As an advertising medium the Free Press is admittedly without a peer in its territory. An advertisement in the Daily Free Press will give better returns than the same announcement inserted in all the daily papers combined between Lake Superior and the Western side of the Rocky Mountains.
